

KROGER AND COSTELLO IS IT REALLY OVER

The Voice from the Pavement - 12 May 2012 Peter Adamis

A dapper Michael Kroger. Two friends brawling in the public arena is not good for them, nor is good for those who respect both men for their talents, wisdom and tenacity.

Both men in their own way have contributed to the Australian political landscape and both men have left an edible mark politically and in the financial business world. The discussion on the ABC appears to be the culmination of a series of innuendos and misinformation by other than that of Michael Kroger and his friend Peter Costello.

There are those who have nothing better to do than to create mischief between two blokes who have a long history together as friends and as colleagues, lack the emotional and political intelligence.

Time will tell and with that time, the friendship that always was will be renewed stronger than ever. Michael Kroger has indicated on a number of occasions that he is semi retired and believes that the new generation of parliamentarians should be given the opportunity to make their mark on the Australian political environment. Peter Costello on the other hand is a great mentor and as such it is plausible for him to continue in that role after leaving the political scene. Both men are right and for the reasons that have been given.

What is of concern, is that far too many sycophants and recalcitrant's are bent on being the mischievous fairies so to speak conjuring up alleged discussions which are not for the public arena.

Life in the political arena for many can be short unless you are Michael Kroger and Peter Costello whose lives are etched in the memories of past and present Australians.

This minor disagreement between two friends may attract those who delight in such fancies and will do whatever they feel is necessary to continue the disagreement by adding fuel to the fire. Its time those recalcitrant's took stock of their actions and withdrawal to a place of safety before they come under the spotlight.

Many of those in political arena and in powerful corporate positions owe their roles to Peter Costello and Michael Kroger. They appear to have caught amnesia all of a sudden and feel that their roles are sacrosanct and free from any public scrutiny. There are also those who owe their livelihood, good name and prosperity to these two men and one hopes that all these people rally around Michael Kroger and Peter Costello and end this disagreement between two friends. Life is far too short to be reflecting on the past, when the journey of the future may be far more rosier. The less said the better in such cases.

The Voice from the Pavement - Peter Adamis is a (not for profit) Journalist/Commentator. He is a retired Australian military serviceman and an Industry organisational & Occupational (OHS) & Training Consultant whose interests are within the parameters of domestic and international political spectrum. He is an avid blogger and contributes to domestic and international community news media outlets as well as to local and Ethnic News. He holds a Bachelor of Adult Learning & Development (Monash), Grad Dip Occupational Health & Safety, (Monash), Dip. Training & Assessment, Dip Public Administration, and Dip Frontline Management. Contact via Email: abalinx@netspace.net.au or via Mobile: 0409965538