

PALLACONIAN BROTHERHOOD HOSTS THALIA GEORGIU PAINTINGS

The Pallaconian Brotherhood located in Albert Street Brunswick hosted a young and inspiring artist, Thalia Georgia paintings at the newly opened cultural centre.

Hundreds of Lakonians and non Lakonians thronged to the cultural centre, many of whom were touched and inspired by the paintings of Thalia Georgiou. They hoped that their children and grandchildren also took an interest in the arts as it was stepping stone into higher society and acceptance by peers and colleagues.

Many of those who came to admire the paintings began their humble beginnings with a agricultural as environment and thus were not exposed to the finer arts such painting, poetry, authors amongst other societal and cultural matters within their peer group.

One did not have to be an art critic to appreciate the vivid colours. and the dash of exuberance that emanated from the paintings. It was like a breath of fresh air one admirer was overheard to say while their companion nodded her head saying the ocean had open up its secretive depths to expose its hidden treasures in the myriad of colours being on display. Peter Adamis
