

No Climate Emergency say 500 Scientists to UN

GRETA THE 16 YEAR OLD CLIMATE CHANGE EXPERT IS WRONG. - THERE IS NO CLIMATE CHANGE!

Abalinx 29 September 2019 Peter Adamis

I don't normally regurgitate news articles unless the author of the article can articulate and express what our generation is thinking. In the Fifties and Sixties we youngsters had more to worry about. We were concerned about a nuclear holocaust and the extinction of mankind. Today some Fifty years later children are being given a platform to scare the daylights out of a whole new generation.

Climate change experts have come out to debunk young Greta's UN passionate speech. I for one was offended by her remarks. Young Greta did not provide any evidence nor did she back up her statements with concrete literature. Some world leaders have taken up the Climate Change "cudgel" and have begun to use young Greta's speech to shore up their political popularity stakes.

What a joke young Greta has become. This young lady believing in her mission has certainly left an impression on the youth today. But all for the wrong reasons. 500 scientists involved in Climate change wrote an open Letter to the UN Secretary General debunking young Greta's point of view. But this letter has not attracted the publicity that Greta's outburst has.

Over 30,000 scientists say
'Catastrophic Man-Made Global Warming' is a complete hoax
and science lie

Why is this so? Is it because a young child was given a platform to speak and what she stated alarmed us. Or was it that her accusations carried some weight.

Whatever the case maybe, history will be her judge, not I. In today's Herald Sun, Kevin Donnelly, a Senior Research Fellow at the Australian Catholic University writes exactly how many have reflected on young Greta's outburst and have come away with a different point of view.

Kevin Donnelly's article is shown below. I certainly enjoyed his article, it made sense to me. Stay strong and be of good cheer. The sun will still rise up in the morning.

2014: Only 500 Days Before 'Climate Chaos
2019: Hey Greta, we need you to convince them it's really going to happen this time

POST SCRIPT:

Further to the above, it is important to note that:

1. I am not against Climate Change demonstrations.
2. I am not against saving the planet.
3. I believe mankind should be doing more to ease the stress on our current environment.
4. Mankind should be reducing industrial waste from entering the environment.
5. Yes we can do better to reduce emissions, toxic waste, industrial waste, cut deforestation and use of fossil fuels.
6. Mankind must be smarter, innovative and cooperative by introducing and harnessing new forms of energy and replenishing what we have used.

In short, I am a very concerned citizen of the world who wants to leave the world a better place for future generations.

What I object to is being forced into believing everything that I am subjected to about mankind being responsible for the ills of the world.

I DO NOT believe that climate change/shift is as a result of mankind but a natural cycle.

Our volcanoes and solar flares alone do damage to the environment than any mankind. Icebergs have not raised sea levels, cyclones, earthquakes and natural disasters are not the fault of mankind.

Finally it is well known that any researcher seeking funds or grants need only to mention climate change in their research and voila they are granted funds. What a joke we have become. No matter whatever the motives, it is clear that Miss Thunberg's publicity stunt ocean voyage (on a royal yacht) and appearance at the U.N. was following a script written more than a quarter-century ago. And it is no secret. This 1992 video of then-12-year-old Severn Cullis-Suzuki addressing the U.N. Earth Summit in Rio de Janeiro, titled "The girl who silenced the world for 5 minutes," has had almost 32 million views on YouTube:

HERALD/SUN - FORGET GRETA - CLIMATE CHANGE EXPERTS SAY.

Herald/Sun 29 September 2019 Kevin Donnelly

Expert climate change scientists argue carbon is not the problem and the world is not headed for extinction.

Who do you believe when it comes to global warming and the supposed impending ecological disaster facing the globe? A 16-year-old unqualified Swedish girl relying on emotional and exaggerated rhetoric or 46 reputable climate change academics convinced that the science is not conclusive or settled?

According to Greta Thunberg's passionate and confrontational speech delivered last week at the United Nation's Climate Summit the world is facing "mass extinction" where "entire ecosystems are collapsing" and unless levels of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere are dramatically reduced, we face flood, fires, droughts and typhoons of biblical proportions.

Thunberg is responsible for starting the global school climate day strike and, even though only an immature adolescent, has been anointed by activists as the climate change messiah. Such is her power that world leaders in London, New York and Europe are happy to sit patiently and applaud while being attacked for callously betraying generations of young people.

Characteristic of past doomsayers and prophets heralding Armageddon Thunberg argues unless Mankind repents the world will end and anyone who disagrees with her is guilty of being "evil".

The Swedish climate doomsayer argues "For more than 30 years, the science has been crystal clear". If only it were that simple. In fact, there are millions of variables in the climate system. Any assumption that rising carbon dioxide means a 'hot house' is at odds with history as there have been ice ages with extremely high carbon dioxide levels. Even the IPCC acknowledges that the climate system is so complex that computer models cannot be used as 'predictive' tools.

The American-based conservative CO2 Coalition has a membership of just over 46 environmental scientists and academics who argue that the present carbon dioxide levels are so low that we are, historically, in a carbon dioxide drought. They point out that carbon dioxide levels have been much higher many times in the past 500 million years and that plant and animal life flourished in those high levels. Consequently, we have nothing to fear from increasing higher carbon dioxide levels that will benefit world food production.

Since the end of the last ice age 10,000 years ago there have been successive periods of warming and cooling. The warmest was 6000-8000 years ago (when the Greenland ice cap was even smaller than today, and West Antarctic glaciers receded) and the coldest was the Little Ice Age in the 17th century.

Sea levels rose after the last ice age and stabilised about 2000 years ago. During the modern warming sea level has been rising about 8 inches every 100 years, but that rise is not accelerating. Contrary to popular statements in the media even the IPCC acknowledges that there has not been an increase in the frequency or severity of cyclones, droughts and hurricanes.

Much like Prime Minister Scott Morrison who once held up a lump of coal in parliament saying to the opposition "don't be afraid, don't be scared" the CO2 Coalition also argues coal is not the problem as carbon dioxide produced by coal is essential for plant life and the world's health.

A scientist uniquely qualified to comment about climate change is the Australian Dr Howard Brady who spent many years in the Antarctic analysing the rock cores in Victoria Land and the Ross Sea. In his book Mirrors and Mazes: A guide through the climate change debate Brady argues fears about man-made global warming are based on highly emotional, misleading and spurious evidence.

Brady warns the "climate debate itself has been dominated by charismatic prophets who warn of catastrophic climate change" and that not only is the computer modelling flawed but its predictions about the destructive effect of increased carbon emissions have never eventuated.

While journalists and commentators associated with the ABC and the now 9 Media Fairfax Press only ever present a doomsday view of climate change Brady also puts the counter-intuitive argument "there are now numerous peer-reviewed scientific journals arguing for global cooling within the next century".

In addition to ignoring the science, it is of great concern that global warming alarmists are fostering a climate where group think prevails and where even primary school age children are being indoctrinated and used as pawns in concerted and carefully orchestrated global campaigns.

While not as extreme or dangerous as the Hitler Youth movement or Mao's Red Guards it's obvious that innocent and vulnerable children, under the guise of protecting their future, are being conditioned and manipulated to be the vanguard of climate activism.

Central to this campaign and as evidenced by Greta Thunberg's speech last week is the use of emotional and abusive language to intimidate and silence any who disagree. In this Orwellian world of politically correct group think and language any who disagree are guilty of thought-crime and branded as climate deniers and climate sceptics.

And it is important to understand that such group think and climate activism is being promoted by an education system that has long since abandoned any commitment to objectivity or balance.
