

NOTHING WRONG WITH TRADITIONAL VALUES

Abalinx 5 October 2019 Peter Adamis

Traditional values in any civilised society are the paradigm glues that hold it together, sustain it, measure it and passed on from one generation after another. When new ideas that enter our society, whether they are of external influences or as a result of youth questioning the paradigm values of the past; they always subject to scrutiny by the establishment.

In this case I prefer to call the elder generation as the traditional establishment. Those guardians of the nation's culture, wellbeing, sustainers and purveyors of societal paradigms. If we take the time to Google the words: "what are traditional values". You get the following response:

The moral and ethical principles traditionally upheld and passed on within a family, as honesty, loyalty, industry, and faith." "The values held to be traditionally taught or reinforced within a family, such as those of high moral standards and discipline".

The new paradigms of today's societal values are completely different to those we grew up with. Our traditional values have been subjected to a massive attack by a minority while the rest of us like sheep follow the devil in disguise.

Same sex marriages, transgender issues, alleged safe schools programmes, the hypocrisy of alleged climate change issues, LGBTQI secret agendas, paedophile religious leaders, lack of respect, racism, women in combat roles, legal euthanasia, legal abortions, alleged safe drug establishments, legalizing marijuana, loss of privacy are but the tip of the iceberg.

Having stated the above is it not something to think about when confronted with changes in our lives. Traditional values and the paradigms of the past have changed considerably. As such, I wonder whether the new paradigms will stay the test of time. My solution is simple. Pass on the time honoured traditional family values, lead by example and allow the next generation to test those values and paradigms for themselves.

Values are important for a society to remain civilised. Paradigms are there to be tested by each generation. Therefore the decisions we make must be within the parameters of what is considered acceptable without destroying the fabric that binds us.

I have great faith in the generations to come as they too will come to the realization that there are some values that are worth keeping. If our generation can do it then so can they.

Peter Adamis is a Journalist/Social Media Commentator and writer. He is a retired Australian military serviceman and an Industry organisational & Occupational (OHS) & Training Consultant whose interests are within the parameters of domestic and international political spectrum. He is an avid blogger and contributes to domestic and international community news media outlets as well as to local and Ethnic News. He holds a Bachelor of Adult Learning & Development (Monash), Grad Dip Occupational Health & Safety, (Monash), and Dip. Training & Assessment, Dip Public Administration, and Dip Frontline Management. Website: abalinx.com Contact via Email: abalinx@gmail.com